Lighthouse ArtCenter offers visions for peace and faculty exhibition reveals works in a range of styles, media

Tequesta, Fla. — (Nov. 12, 2010) Let there be peace on Earth, and let it begin with the Lighthouse ArtCenter.

That is the theme of the ArtCenter's next exhibition, "Peace on Earth," presented by Kathryn W. Davis.

The juried exhibition, which runs Nov. 18-Dec. 30, will feature artists' visions of world peace. At the same time, the ArtCenter also will hold its Annual Faculty Exhibition, with works in many styles and media by faculty of the School of Art.

"Is there no better time than the end of the year to reflect on how we might eliminate conflict in the coming year?" asked Katie Deits, executive director of the Lighthouse ArtCenter. "And there is much we can learn from Mrs. Davis' century of experience."

Mrs. Davis, who turns 104 in February, has previously presented exhibitions at the Lighthouse ArtCenter featuring Rockwell Kent and the Women of Peconic Bay. In 2007, she was awarded the Woodrow Wilson Award for Distinguished Service.

"My many years have taught me that there always will be conflict," Mrs. Davis said. "But I'll remind you that love, kindness and support are also part of human nature. My challenge to you is to bring about a mindset of preparing for peace instead of preparing for war."

Mrs. Davis, who has homes in Maine and Hobe Sound, is a life-long philanthropist who focuses all of her largest giving in the areas of world peace. Mrs. Davis is a Wellesley College graduate and earned a PhD in international relations from the University of Geneva in Switzerland, and her husband was a diplomat. She also is an artist who began painting at the age of 96 and who exhibits her works. She is highly interested in the arts and founded the Davis Museum and Cultural Center on the Wellesley College Campus.

Mrs. Davis' primary motivation is promoting peace projects and her current major gift of $1 million annually funds the Kathryn W. Davis Projects for Peace, in which she provides 100 university students with a grant of $10,000 each. To qualify for the grant, students must submit a proposal for a peace project anywhere in the world, provide a budget and report the expected outcome. These students create substantial change and education in communities by going on-site around the globe and doing hands-on work — all on $10,000.

The opening reception and awards ceremony for “Peace on Earth” and the Annual Faculty Exhibition is 5:30-7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 18. Members attend free, $5 non-members, ages 12 and older. RSVP to (561) 746-3101.
